Work, Communication & Interaction Style

Goal-Oriented.

You tend to be goal-oriented and intent on meeting or exceeding the expectations set for you. You have good follow-through on tasks when engaged with your work.

Very Cooperative.

You are likely to be very cooperative and obliging, which suggests that you will value harmony in a group situation as opposed to advancing your own interests. You are likely to place a strong emphasis on treating others fairly and with respect, which should see you viewed as someone who is considerate, trustworthy, and perhaps even selfless. Cooperativeness is a trait well suited to service-oriented roles.

Motivated.

Possessing an inner drive, you are likely committed to achieving certain goals that are of personal importance. Team members will generally perceive you as being motivated and driven to succeed, provided that the goals are clear.

Temperament, Attitudes & Outlook

Conventional.

Many people would describe you as down to earth and conventional. You are likely to be more concerned with practical matters than abstract concepts and to be more comfortable with things that are familiar than those that appear to be novel. You may also be inclined to favour routine over experimentation.

Very Patient.

You are likely to be extremely tolerant of obstacles, setbacks, and others. Others may describe you as being calm and level-headed when under pressure, and unruffled by challenges and setbacks. You tend to have a relaxed outlook on life and come across as easy-going, but this may mean that others perceive you as not acting with urgency.

Problem Solving

When solving problems at work, you are likely to see the benefits of proven and conventional methods. You are likely to recognise the risks involved in trying out new or experimental approaches. Additionally, you are likely to flex between a methodical approach and an unstructured or flexible approach as required. When solving problems at work, you are likely to see the benefits of experimenting with new concepts and ideas, and may be less likely to rely on conventional, tried and true methods.

People can vary in the skills they rely on to solve problems. Some may be better at solving written and verbal problems, some may be better with numerical and number-based problems, while others are better at problems that are abstract, spatial or conceptual in nature. Knowing which of these areas is stronger for you can help you to apply your strengths when solving problems at work.

Your strengths are likely to be in the area of verbal or written problems and in the area of numerical or number based problems. You may be more comfortable thinking about problems in these forms.

Common problem solving situations involving the use of verbal or numerical information include:

- Drawing conclusions from written passages.
- Identifying errors or mistakes in documents.
- Conducting numerical analyses.
- Interpreting numerical information presented in tables, charts and graphs.

Strengths & Potential Challenges

Strengths

- You will generally have good follow-through and be attentive to goals.
- You are likely a "self-starter" who will not be difficult to motivate, provided the job expectations are clear.
- Typically agreeable and cooperative, you have a congenial work persona that generally makes for harmonious relations with co-workers and team members.
- You will likely go out of your way to accommodate other people. Your agreeable nature means you should be highly coachable, with an ideal profile for service-oriented roles.
- Ambiverts like you tend to be flexible enough to have potential suitability for a variety of roles, including those that emphasise social interactions and those that do not.
- You will likely be comfortable in roles where job duties don't vary greatly from one day to the next and where expectations are clearly laid out.
- Highly tolerant of frustrations and easy-going by nature, you are likely to bring a sense of calm and stability to collaborative tasks. You are likely to be more accepting of setbacks than most, and tend to be unruffled by the presence of stress or pressure.

Potential Challenges

- You are inclined to defer and are not prone to confrontation, and so may have difficulty being direct and standing firm in your opinions when the situation requires it.
- Highly cooperative individuals like you can sometimes place too much emphasis on accommodating everyone's needs. In leadership roles, you may need to make tough decisions that do not suit everyone in the team - this may be challenging for you.
- You may not be most comfortable in roles that involve constant change or frequent experimentation.
- Given your highly tolerant and relaxed nature, you may find it uncomfortable if required to act with a great sense of urgency when the situation calls for it.

Development Suggestions

Work Habits

Achievement-oriented by nature, you will benefit from being challenged to achieve even greater effectiveness in a role and to look for opportunities to further refine your strengths and apply them for greater impact.

Your motivation and drive are best harnessed by prioritising activities in a way that optimises your ability to achieve results. You should look for places where you can add the greatest value and use your natural drive to deliver in areas of impact.

Attitudes & Outlook

Your natural preference may be to walk the same familiar ground. But it may benefit you to remember to never stop learning and to engage in at least a few activities with the sole intent of learning something new.

Problem Solving

You are likely to be most effective at solving numerical or verbal problems. One way to develop your effectiveness in problem solving may be to approach problems from a numerical or verbal perspective where possible. For example, problems could be framed numerically by describing them in figures, charts or graphs. Problems could be framed verbally by describing the problem in a written form and using that description as a basis for problem solving.

Interaction Style

You are congenial by nature and have a tendency to defer to others at times. Listening to others' opinions is important, but there are times where you will need to assert yourself, even if it doesn't come naturally, in order to achieve the best outcomes.

You are likely someone who will put other people's needs before your own. This is likely to make you a cooperative team player. However, you will be well served by remembering that there are times where you need to put your own interests first. In doing so, you may be better positioned to help others as well as yourself.

Effective performance is often a combination of getting things done and interacting well with others. There are times when remaining focused on getting work done is the best approach and times when spending more time engaging with others is beneficial. It may benefit you to take a moment to consider the right balance for a particular job and where you may need to rebalance.

Temperament

Given your highly tolerant and patient nature, you are likely to feel uncomfortable being rushed or pressured by others into taking immediate action. Your prioritisation of stable and calm relationships can mean you are unlikely to tell others when they have disappointed you. Understanding that your time, effort, and opinions are valuable may help increase your comfort with voicing your opinions when others don't meet your expectations.

Workplace Stressors & Motivators

The following section relates common workplace situations to your behavioural preferences, to better understand how your potential may be best realised. Situations that may be comfortable or motivating for some people may be stressful or de-motivating for others. Below is a list of common workplace situations together with an indication of how each may impact you.
